

MERCURY

Home News Sport Leisure & Lifestyle Jobs Motors Homes Classifieds A
What's On Movies Fashion Food Gardening Gaming Competitions Puzzles

Published: 16/05/2011 09:00 - Updated: 13/05/2011 14:54

Weston jewellery firm launches proposal-in-a-box

By Ciaran Gold

WEDDING proposal kits can now be bought off the shelf thanks to a Weston jewellery company.

You'll still have to bend down on one knee, set a romantic ambience and pop the question yourself – but Harriet Kelsall Jewellery Design will deal with any angst you have over choosing the ring with their Commission in a Box.

The ready-made proposal box offers brides-to-be the chance to design their own bespoke engagement ring.

Managing director Harriet Kelsall said: "Over the years we've met thousands of couples planning their big day and heard tonnes of proposal stories, good and bad.

"We know that proposing can be nerve-wracking and we also that whilst men can be reluctant to pop the big question empty-handed they're also terribly afraid of getting it wrong.

"So we came up with the Commission in a Box which we feel is the perfect solution to those proposal dilemmas.

"What could be more romantic than presenting the woman of your dreams with the opportunity to have her engagement ring designed and made especially for her."

The proposal kit includes an appointment card along with information about the designer working who will be working with the lucky lady and information about the goldsmiths who will be making the ring hand by hand.

Space is included in the box for a personal token.