

PRESS RELEASE

Christmas came early to Hertfordshire business

Bespoke jewellery design company Harriet Kelsall Jewellery Design opened its Hertfordshire doors in the village of Halls Green near Weston at the weekend to treat over 200 guests to an early Christmas party.

As a perfect complement to the November snow, staff served up mince pies and Winter Pimms and guests enjoyed children's jewellery making workshops, a spot of Christmas shopping and a series of fiery goldsmith demos.

Christmas decorations and nibbles ensured families got into the festive mood and many guests brought along their own pieces of jewellery in to be cleaned at no cost by the jewellery experts.

Harriet Kelsall, Managing Director of Harriet Kelsall Jewellery Design, the UK's leading bespoke jewellery design company, which specialises in engagement rings, wedding rings and eternity rings, said: "It was a superb event and everyone had a great time, particularly watching the cuttlefish casting and the children's jewellery making. We had a record number of people, with a huge number of children turning their hand to jewellery making.

"Visitors were also given demos in computer aided design and we had an exhibition showing how our sister shop in Cambridge will be refitted by designer Callum Lumsden, the man behind the shop designs of Mary 'Queen of Shops' Portas."

The winner of the children's jewellery making competition was 7-year-old Hannah Laskey-Sanders, from Stotfold in Hertfordshire, who attends St. Francis College in Letchworth.

Harriet added: "Congratulations to Hannah, who made a lovely Alice band and bracelet and put so much thought into her designs – a budding designer of the future."
